Description :

PDF-ab8bb | In 1947, as Independence approached, plans were made to partition the country into India and Pakistan. Punjab and Bengal would be split in two, with a part going to each country. Sindh, however, would be given intact to the new country, Pakistan. Hindus had been a well-integrated minority in Sindh for centuries, and would continue to be so. However, the creation of a new country on religious lines... Sindh: Stories from a Vanished Homeland
